Bill Hendricks, a Cal Poly professor emeritus, was named interim dean for CAFES, effective Jan. 1. He will serve through Aug. 31, or until the permanent dean is selected. He last served as an associate dean for the college from August 2020 through last December. In that role he oversaw college operations and enrollment management. He retired last December after 28-1/2 years at the campus. He joined Cal Poly in 1994 and taught in the Recreation Administration Program, and he served as professor and first department chair for the Recreation, Parks and Tourism Administration Department. A national search for a permanent dean for the college is underway.

Part of any Thanksgiving meal is stuffing — the bird, of course, and, in a sense, the dinner guests too — and one Cal Poly graduate has left her mark on the popular side dish. As you head down crowded grocery store aisles in advance of the holiday, keep an eye out for Mrs. Cubbison's boxed dressings and stuffings. Unlike Betty Crocker, Mrs. Cubbison was a flesh-and-blood person. Long before women became regulars in the corporate world, Cal Poly alumna Sophie Huchting Cubbison (home economics, 1912) parlayed her knack for baking and her "degree" into a successful company that still bears her name, according to Laura Sorveti, an archivist for Kennedy Library.
