Retirements

• After a career spanning almost three decades, Fred DePiero will embark on a new journey: retirement. While serving Cal Poly, DePiero took a leadership role in pivotal student-centered initiatives in engineering, including expanding support services and advancement of underserved populations. He continues to be a tireless advocate for student success and a tremendous colleague, mentor and friend. To celebrate DePiero’s remarkable legacy, a retirement reception will be held Thursday, June 6, from 4-6 p.m. in the Bonderson Engineering Project Center (No. 197). RSVP for the June 6 retirement celebration at <https://rb.gy/oqlwbn>.

• Jeff Reimer, instructional support technician in the Natural Resources Management and Environmental Sciences Department, is retiring after 27 years at Cal Poly. He joined the department in 1997 after earning a bachelor’s degree in forestry and natural resources and a master’s degree in agriculture. Reimer has served countless students and faculty during his time at the university as well as contributing to important campus initiatives. His last day will be Friday, June 14. Wish him well in his new adventures by signing his online tribute by visiting <https://t.ly/EZ9of>. He and his wife, Carey, plan to hit the road in their camper and explore.
